

Clark Calls
Lewis Course
'Insult' To
United States

Washington, Jan. 14 (AP)—Attorney General Tom C. Clark contended in the Supreme court today that John L. Lewis' course in last fall's soft coal strike was "an insult to the United States itself."

Asking the highest tribunal to uphold the $3,510,000 in contempt fines imposed on Lewis and the United Mine Workers, Clark argued the government sought only to maintain governmental functions when it turned to the courts for an order against a coal strike.

When Lewis disregarded that order, he said, it was a "contempt" that was an "insult" to the country and that "compromises all law and invites mob rule."

Setting Precedents

"Surely," Clark said, "government has the authority and the power to defend itself against destruction from within—as it has the duty to defend the country from destruction from without."

"When that issue is involved no one is immunized—no person or group is beyond the reach of the arm of the court. No person is above the law—and this is a country and government of laws."

Clark led off the government in a case expected to set far-reaching precedents in interpretations of laws applying to organized labor. One is whether the Norris-LaGuardia act, which has been on the statute books for many years, bars the government from seeking an injunction against a union.

The law outlaws injunctions, orders to do this, or not to do that, against unions in labor disputes with private employers.

Lewis' attorneys contend the law applies also to the government and that hence the miners' union chieftain was within his legal rights when he ignored an order by the U. S. District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough against a strike. They said Goldsborough had no right to issue the order.

No Infringement

Goldsborough ruled the disregard for his order was "contempt" and levied the fines. To speed a final ruling, the case was taken directly from his court to the Supreme court.

Lewis then called off the strike until the Supreme court could act. His miners are under orders to continue working until March 31.

Clark told the justices of the highest court that in this case the government is not seeking "to infringe in the slightest" on any rights of labor or on the freedoms guaranteed to all citizens by the constitution.

ANNOUNCE $1800
IN EARLY GIFTS TO SCOUT DRIVE

Gettysburg's drive to raise its share of the $100,000 needed to construct a memorial camp for the 3,000 boy scouts in the York-Adams area started off at noon today with the announcement that $1,800 has been raised already by one sub-committee that contacted a few of its prospective contributors prior to the opening of the drive.

M. C. Jones, chairman of the committee seeking donations from industries, announced the $1,800 figure and added that the amount was given by only a few who were contacted so far and that his committee is planning to intensify its activities during the coming week.

Dean W. E. Tilberg, chairman of the Black Walnut district, told of the need for a new camp to replace the two present camps in the council area. Both camps, Ganoga at York Haven and Conewago, near New Oxford, are outmoded and outgrown, he said, and neither can supply the swimming facilities and facilities for outdoor life that will be available at the new 500 acre woodland camp in the mountains near Dillsburg.

Plan Memorial Lodge

Dean Tilberg told the group that a memorial camp section is to be constructed by the Black Walnut district within the area of the scout camp. In the Black Walnut area will be a troop lodge and four Adirondack lean-tos which will be dedicated to the men who lost their lives from the Black Walnut area who were former scouts, and to all scouts from the district who were in service during the war. The troop lodge will cost about $6,000 alone, Tilberg added.

The new camp will permit the presentation of a more constructive program for the boys of York and Adams county, Tilberg asserted, pointing out that it is to be built according to the "last word" in camp construction. "Through this camp

ASK SENIORS TO DECIDE ABOUT
COMMENCEMENT

It will be up to the members of the senior class of Gettysburg high school to decide whether they want to follow a new graduation plan discussed at Monday night's meeting of the school board, held at the high school, or whether they will stick to the old practice of a baccalaureate service on Sunday and commencement exercises Tuesday evening.

The question was brought before the school board by Superintendent of Schools Lloyd C. Keefe, who suggested that the baccalaureate service and the commencement might be combined and held in the Majestic theatre instead of having two functions, one in a church and the other in the high school auditorium.

Tickets Limited

Each graduate can be given three tickets for commencement under the plan which has been followed in the past, Dr. Keefe said. This, in several instances, has excluded some members of the graduate's family from attending commencement.

There are 100 in the senior class this year. He said the proposed plan had been discussed with the faculty and approved by a majority of the members.

Approval of the school board was given, should the members of the senior class desire the change. It will be left in their hands to decide.

Only other business discussed at Monday night's meeting was routine.

Geiman, secretary, at the opening of the Laymen's session. The officers had been nominated for the posts by the nominating committee at a previous session.

Doctor Cline then told briefly of the formation of a provisional Brotherhood committee at a recent dinner session of a national Brotherhood representative with local men.

Dr. Norman Richardson, provisional chairman of the Brotherhood committee, outlined the purposes of the American Brotherhood, which is sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews to fight prejudice and hatreds among creeds and races and told of the advantages of being affiliated with the national organization. Deadline Near On Some Income Taxes

Midnight, tomorrow night, will be the deadline for filing of 1946 declarations of estimated tax, but this deadline should not be confused with the March 15 deadline for filing of income tax returns, the Internal Revenue bureau warned today.

The making out of these declarations has kept local justices of the peace and others busy since the first of the year.

The Declaration of Estimated Tax is filed by those persons whose income is not subject to withholding taxes, or whose income, while subject in part to withholding, is derived largely from sources not subject to withholding. Two major groups affected are business and professional men and farmers.

LIST CAUSES FOR RELIEF IN ADAMS COUNTY

Illness of the wage earner was reported as the most frequent reason for granting general aid by the Adams county Public Assistance office at the regular meeting of the assistance board Monday.

A survey of the reasons for granting aid in the various cases reported than blind pensions during the past year showed that in the majority of the general assistance cases the grants were made because the wage earner either had fallen ill or had suffered an accident which prevented him or her from continuing usual employment. As a result, Mrs. Verna Myers, director of the county assistance board reported, the turnover in general assistance is very rapid with the families dropping off the rolls as soon as the breadwinner is able to resume employment. Because of that, too, she added, the general assistance case load varies from day to day to a considerable extent.

Results of Audit

Exhaustion of resources was listed as the principal reason given by those seeking old age pensions. A number of persons who had saved money over the years and felt they would have enough to see them through their old age are now on the assistance rolls because present inflationary costs have exhausted the modest budgets set for themselves. The second largest reason given by those seeking old age assistance is the loss of contributions from relatives who previously were able to support them, but for one reason or another were unable to continue the support.

LIONS WITNESS
DEMONSTRATION OF WRESTLING

There were no takers for the challenge by Clyde Cole, Gettysburg college wrestling coach, for any member of the Gettysburg Lions club to try to stay on the mat for two minutes with two of the college wrestlers who appeared before the clubmen in a demonstration of wrestling rules and holds Monday evening at the Shelter House.

Coach Cole told the Lions it takes as much energy and stamina for nine minutes of hard wrestling as for a full-length game of football for the participants.

Ted Lenker of Hershey and Joe Riley of Pottsville, N. J., members of the Gettysburg college wrestling squad, demonstrated an assortment of falls, holds and methods of breaking those holds in a 15-minute demonstration on a mat spread in front of the speaker's table after the clubmen had dined.

The wrestlers were directed by Coach Cole, whose squad from the college won their first match on Saturday against matmen from Haverford by a score of 21 to 9. Cole explained the change from ratings on time advantage and referees' decisions to the present point system. He said there is no comparison between professional wrestling and amateur college matwork. He invited the clubmen to attend future wrestling bouts at the college.

President Milton R. Remmel presided at the meeting with 59 Lions in attendance. A request from the Boy Scout camp fund campaign committee for a $100 donation was referred to the finance committee. The appeal for the scouts was presented by Henry T. Bream and Dean W. E. Tilberg.

Robert Troxell was introduced as a new member of the club and a joint meeting with Rotary club was announced for March 17.

Members of the club chorus sang several selections.

The general chairman of the Conewago district, Edward H. Blettner, of Hanover, will be present to help in the distribution of prospects and discuss with the group assembled the salient points in the campaign for the "Living Memorial."

Trostle announced that an equal number of Lions and Rotarians will participate in the solicitation for funds to cover the Littlestown share, which is only $1,500 of the total Conewago district quota of $18,500.

Trostle said the drive is well under way and meeting with great success in the York-Adams area and "we hope to do our share in the characteristic Littletonian manner."

Hear Annual Reports

Reports were presented on the past year's work by Prof. Richard B. Shade, minister of music, and the Rev. Dr. Ralph R. Gresh, pastor of the church. Doctor Gresh's report disclosed that 135 new members, the largest number in any one year in the history of the congregation, had been added during the past year. The minister made 1,200 pastoral calls, and conducted 35 baptisms, 25 weddings and 35 funerals during the year.

Two recommendations of the planning committee were adopted by the congregation. One recommendation called for the construction of rest rooms and choir rooms in the basement of the church on the York street side. The other recommendation was that an appeal be made for contributions to the building fund so that larger projects, such as redecorating the church, could be taken up when materials are available for such work.

It was pointed out that the sixth anniversary of the arrival of Dr. and Mrs. Gresh here will be celebrated Wednesday.

PAN-AMERICAN SOLIDARITY IN NEED OF REPAIR

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, new Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, sounded warning in his address before the Cleveland Foreign Affairs forum last week-end that "we face the intimate necessity of refreshing our indispensable Pan-American solidarity."

"There is too much evidence," declared the senator, "that we are drifting apart—and that a Communist upsurge is moving in. We face no greater need than to restore the warmth of new world unity which reached an all-time high at San Francisco" (at the conference which organized the United Nations).

Yesterday there came from Brazil a news dispatch which forms an important parenthetical addition to Vandenberg's statement. President Eurico Gaspar Dutra of Brazil advised his countrymen for the first time not to vote for Communists in next Sunday's election. He said the people must support only "those parties which do not propose to scrap the Constitution and take power for their own dictatorship, for one class or group." He added:

Democracy Not Passive
"Democracy neither is nor must be passive. It has the right to defend itself. It is unthinkable that the liberalization of its freedom go as far as its own destruction."

And why the need of solidarity among the many nations of the Western Hemisphere? The answer, obviously is "mutual advantage." Specifically the chief gain lies in the military security which it would afford—at least in these perilous days when peace is on the wing, with far too many folk blazing away haphazardly with pump-guns in its vicinity.

Back in March of 1945, just such defensive solidarity was provided for in the Act of Chapultepec, adopted by the Pan-American Conference in Mexico City. That was in part a war-time measure, but it also contemplated the setting up of a permanent inter-American general staff to draw up plans for hemispheric defense, effective use of methods to prevent the growth of subversive activities, and complete outlawing of totalitarian agents.

The Act of Chapultepec helped bridge the remaining days of the war, but many of the ideals which were to be projected into the peace still remain to be implemented. Our "indispensable Pan-American solidarity" certainly does need "refreshing." There are some mighty weak spots in it.

A vital point to remember is that prevention of the growth of subversive activities is quite as essential to hemispheric security as is joint military defense.

Willie Francis Is Near Death Again

New Iberia, La., Jan. 14 (AP) — Lanky Willie Francis is rubbing elbows with death today but he's "right interested to find out if I can die like the man I thought I was."

Francis, who once cheated the electric chair when a mechanical malfunction allowed him to walk away from it alive, was singularly cool when he learned that the United States Supreme court had ruled him subject to another trip to the chair.

"I always sort of wondered if I was a brave man," the tall, cocoa-colored negro said in an interview here today.

Detectives Find $167,000

In 'Starvation' Quarters

New York, Jan. 14 (AP) — The wizened old lady slowly climbed down the three flights to a neighbor's basement apartment, timidly knocked on the door and, when the neighbor appeared, asked for a cup of coffee.

Della Edwards, 67, had been doing this for many a day, so it was to make conversation that the neighbor, Mrs. Mary Bennett, asked yesterday:

"How's your brother, Miss Della?"

"I Think He's Dead"

Still sipping the hot coffee, and pulling her old sweater tighter about her to fight off the cold, the woman muttered:

"I think Charlie's dead. Hasn't moved since Saturday."

Mrs. Bennett immediately called a priest who climbed the dank staircase into the squalor of the Edwards' apartment. There he saw the withered body of Charles Edwards, 77, covered with an old-fashioned nightgown, leaning on the floor beside his unmade bed, his head buried in his hands in attitude of prayer.

Died of Malnutrition
In another dusty bedroom, piled with yellowed newspapers and remains of unfinished meals, lay Miss Anna Edwards, 67, pleading for food.

The priest called police. The police physician studied the ancient figure kneeling as if in supplication. He took out his card and wrote:

"Dead on arrival. Natural causes." The women were taken to Kings County hospital where doctors diagnosed Anna Edwards' ailment as malnutrition.

Uncover Wealth
The neighbors talked. They said the Edwards had lived in such poverty as long as they could remember.

NOTRE DAME'S PREXY HITS AT GRID REFORMERS

By JERRY LISKA

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 14 (AP)—Notre Dame, perennially a foot powerhouse, today was pledged to any "practical" athletic standards adopted by major schools, but demanded that the Irish not be frozen out of big time competition.

Obviously weighing the "purity code" adopted last week by the National College Athletic Association, Notre Dame's president, the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, CSC, last night hit at "so-called reformers" in the intercollegiate picture at a banquet honoring the 1946 "fighting Irish," mythical National football champions.

Father Cavanaugh scorned "the mere publishing of noble, high-sounding codes which are often hypocritically evaded in actual practice," but definitely showed concern over schedule sanctions which may evolve from the NCAA's proposed de-emphasis program.

Will Go Along

"If the great institutions of this country agree on practical standards for athletics and decide not to schedule other institutions that will not observe these standards," he declared, "Notre Dame will go along, providing the decent corollary of such a policy is put into effect, that no institution observing these standards will be excluded from competition."

In still another portion of his address, Father Cavanaugh emphasized that any new collegiate code "must be honestly conceived without prejudice to any institution and it must be faithfully carried out by those who subscribe to it."

In some quarters, the break-off of the army series after this season and the absence of neighborliness on the gridiron between such big nine king-pins as Michigan, Ohio State, Minnesota and, most recently Illinois, are regarded as a tip-off on what Father Cavanaugh had in mind in his plea for future gridiron sociability among "great educational institutions."

Notre Dame Inducements

He indicated that if there was any evil in college athletics it was alumni aid to budding stars which he implied was absent at Notre Dame. The abundance of "great athletes" at Notre Dame, he said was no mystery.

"In every town of any size in every state of the union," Father Cavanaugh asserted, "boys who hear of Notre Dame spirit and of the educational advantages here, who listen to Notre Dame games, plan to come when they are old enough, providing they can meet the high standards and disciplinary standards that are held up for athletes and non-athletes x x x."

TRAP RABBITS TO TRANSPLANT

Harrisburg, Jan. 14 (AP)—Everybody is benefiting in the Pennsylvania Game commission's winter trapping activities—even next summer's gardeners.

To secure rabbits for restocking purposes, the Game commission has enlisted the aid of youth groups to trap the bunnies from garden areas in cities and borough limits, cemeteries and other sections.

The commission is paying 75 cents for each rabbit trapped by authorized agents and delivered alive in good condition to the local game protectors.

Seth Gordon, executive director of the commission, said today more than 3,000 bunnies have already been trapped from these urban areas.

30,000 Last Year

Emphasizing that trapping is conducted only on lands where no hunting is legally possible, Gordon urged persons interested in aiding the program to contact their district game protectors immediately.

Gordon said over 30,000 cottontails were transferred last year to replenish depleted areas.

He added that up to January 9 more than 45,000 bunnies had been received from Missouri and liberated on open shooting grounds, most of them in excellent condition.

The commission has contracted for 73,224 Missouri rabbits and shipment will continue into February.

Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 14 (AP)—Scranton's Sabath (Sam) Mele won the Eastern League's 1946 batting championship with a .342 average and also led the loop's hitters in total bases and triples.

Team At Bottom, Its Star At Top

New York, Jan. 14 (AP)—The fact that the Philadelphia Rockets are at the bottom of the American Hockey league standings with only three wins and four ties in 39 games means nothing to their star goal maker, Phil Hergeshelmer.

Hergeshelmer continued at the top of the league's individual scoring column today for the fourth straight week, although he holds a scant one-point margin over Cliff Simpson of Indianapolis. Phil collected two goals and two assists in three games last week to boost his point total to 53.

Jack McGill of the Hershey Bears, fifth last week, moved up to third place, displacing Johnny Holota of Cleveland. Holota, dropping to fourth, still holds the distinction of having scored the most goals, 28 in 35 games.

Bob Carse of Cleveland and Les Douglas of Indianapolis, ranking fifth and sixth, respectively, in total points, are tied for high honors in assists with 31 apiece. Carse has played in 33 games, Douglas in 25.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Jan. 14 (AP)—Attention baseball prospects: if someone is offering you a big bonus, better grab it quick. . . . The major-league executive committee is scheduled to meet in Cincinnati tomorrow and straighten out kinks in the bonus legislation that was agreed upon last month. . . . When that is bulletined by the commissioner there'll be just 30 days to collect before it becomes effective. . . . Southern Association club owners, who figured their new president should replace Billy Evans on the minor league executive committee, also meet tomorrow to select their new president. Atlanta's Earl Mann already has been picked for the committee job, which may give you some idea of what they're thinking.

SPORTS BEFORE YOUR EYES

Jumping John Hargis, who has been hitting about 20 points a game for Texas U's basketballers, picked his college because he wanted to play baseball for Uncle Billy Ditch. And he worked for a year after leaving high school to get enough dough to enter college. Dodger fans have picked "neglected" Pete Reiser as "sports king" of the March of Dimes Ball and will name two queens to reign with him. . . . Any one pointed out that that Smiley Quick, the first public links golfer to make a United States Walker cup team will play his International matches on a public links—St. Andrews? . . . Because of the housing shortage, Villanova college had about 15 kids living in the roped-off spectator area around the swimming pool. When they finally got a regular place to live, we assume they said "tanks."

SURE AS DEATH AND TAXES

When the Indiana U. basketball team went to play Ohio State, Coach Branch McCracken made his players walk from the railroad station to their hotel. . . . Upon arrival, freshman center Charley Meyer assembled the squad in the lobby and said: "Listen, fellows. We gotta start winning some of these games or the coach will have us hitch hiking to games."

Joe Tinker Faces Amputation Of Leg

By ARTHUR MARTIN

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP)—Joe Tinker lay on a hospital bed today awaiting amputation of his left leg and, to all appearances, being late on a throw to first base would have caused him more concern. His major worry appeared to be that he might miss some of his baseball activities during the coming season.

Tinker said he expected "to see some baseball" this summer but probably would not do as much scouting for the Boston Braves as he has in recent seasons.

The former Chicago Cub shortstop, who helped make baseball history after the turn of the century as the starting cog in the famed Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance infield combination, will have his leg severed above the knee Thursday to halt a gangrenous condition.

The infection, complicated by poor blood circulation, grew from a small sore on his left foot. Removal of a toe several weeks ago failed to halt the spread.

Now 66, the occupant of baseball's hall of fame discussed the loss of his leg without rancor.

"That leg's seen a lot of good service," he said. "I guess losing it is just one of the penalties of old age. If my blood circulation had been what it should, that little sore wouldn't have amounted to a thing."

Boxer Sentenced As Draft Dodger

Philadelphia, Jan. 14 (AP)—Gus Dorazio, once the fourth-ranking heavyweight boxer in the nation and a 1941 victim of champion Joe Louis' power-packed fists, has been sentenced to a year and a day in federal prison as a draft dodger.

Dorazio, 29-year-old father of two children, was convicted on charges of falsely representing himself as a war worker to evade induction in the armed services.

Judge Guy K. Bard passed sentence in U. S. District Court yesterday. The jurist said he intended giving the ex-fighter a two-year sentence but reduced it because Dorazio's wife is expecting another child.

Today's Talk

Our Friends to Our South

It seems strange that this Northern continent of ours has remained for so long ignorant and unconcerned about the great nations below us—Mexico, Central and South America. Theirs, too, has been a long strife and struggle toward liberty and freedom.

The dominant figure in all South America is that of Simon Bolivar, known as the George Washington of South America. He was an admirer of Washington and of the United States, more than a hundred and fifty years ago, and like Washington, he was an aristocrat, who as a young man determined to free his country, Venezuela, from the cruel rule of the Spaniards. He sacrificed everything that he had to bring about this purpose. He suffered defeat after defeat, but kept coming back. He even led his ragged army across the Andes, awakening the spirit of freedom in all the countries south of his own.

It was Bolivar who undoubtedly inspired Martin to break the bonds of slavery that bound all Eastern South America to the Spanish. It was a long thankless struggle to many of these patriots—but victory finally was theirs. In the end, however, there were quarreling groups who sought to take advantage of Bolivar's triumphs, as he died neglected, discouraged, and almost alone. In his last moments he was attended by an American doctor, who even gave him a clean shirt for his burial! But today he is the hero of millions. In Caracas, his former home, is a memorial to his memory that inspires all visitors. New York honored him with a great statue in Central Park, and his name today is full of lustre.

These friends of ours to the South are cultured, sensitive people, who want to be our friends. They feel our long neglect of them. We need them and they need us. We can cooperate. We can, and must, be friends. We have much that they lack, and they have much that we lack. There is no area of this earth so steeped in tradition, historic lore, and friendliness. No continent so romantic and rich in natural beauty. Let's learn to know these neighbors of ours!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Living People"

Just Folks

HE'S SERIOUS
When he wonders if your mother
Thinks him good enough for you,
And your father and your brother
Like to see him come in view,
When he visits—pocket choking
With cigars and candy bars,
That young fellow isn't joking.
He's not selling motor cars.

When he calls upon you nightly
And for hours and hours he sticks,
While the lights are burning brightly,
Talking sports or politics,
When he stays with father smoking,
Though the hour is getting late,
That young fellow isn't joking.
He's not selling real estate.

When at you he's slyly winking
And he doesn't hear what's said,
It is plain that he is thinking:
"Will they ever go to bed?"
Though to you it's most provoking,
Lovely maiden, bear it well,
That young fellow isn't joking.
It's himself he's there to sell.

U.S. MAY BE ON VERGE OF SHIFT IN CHINA POLICY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Unhappy China, torn by civil strife between Communists and the Nationalist regime under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, is in the midst of a fresh crisis—the problem of making a go of the new coalition government which has been organized by non-Communist parties pending a general election—and developments are causing observers to wonder whether the United States is on the verge of a shift in its Far Eastern policy.

That's giving an incomplete picture of the position for, even if the coalition can function, the bloody gulf between the central government and the powerful Communist party still will remain. And there are few, if any, impartial observers who would venture to predict that this war of isms could be settled in any other way than the one now being employed—combat on the battlefield.

Vandenberg's View
There we have one of the most dangerous and tragic situations of our time—perilous not only to poor old China but to world peace. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, new Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, brought the thing home in a speech before the Cleveland Council of World Affairs Saturday night when he declared that "there will never be a minute when China's destiny is not of acute concern to the United States and to a healthy world."

But the senator did more than that. After referring to the coalition of non-Communist parties, he said: "It is my own view that our own Far Eastern policy might well now shift its emphasis. While still recommending unity, it might well encourage those who have so heroically set their feet upon this road, and discourage those who make the road precarious."

The Communists thus far have refused to join the new coalition or to have anything to do with the constitution which the Assembly adopted at Nanking. However, the Communists are not the only ones at odds with the efforts of the liberals to bring peace to China.

There are powerful reactionary elements in the Kuomintang (Nationalist) party—war lords and other vested interests. Only a few days ago General C. Marshall, on winding up his lengthy peace mission as special U. S. envoy to China, accused extremist elements of both sides of being responsible for the continuation of civil war.

"The salvation of the situation as I see it," said Marshall, "would be the assumption of leadership by the liberals in the government and in the minority parties, a splendid group of men, but who as yet lack the political power to exercise a controlling influence."

That idea would seem to have close relation to Vandenberg's suggestion that Uncle Sam might encourage those who are working for unity, and discourage those who are making the road precarious.

To Visit State College

Kostlov said Russia was "particularly interested" in four-row planting machinery to be used on the great collective farms of the Ukraine. In passing, the Russian expert compared Pennsylvania's farming regions with those of the Soviet and said his delegation plans to visit the Pennsylvania State college to make a study of agricultural research work underway there.

Meanwhile, Gov. John C. Bell, Jr., opened the show officially last night with a plea that Pennsylvania's farm policies be kept "free from regimentation and politics."

"The Pennsylvania farmer," he declared, "is proud of his independence and of his traditional freedom of action. He does not want paternalism or regimentation."

Miles Horst, state Agricultural secretary and chairman of the State Farm Show Commission, urged Pennsylvania farm women to expand their social and rural community activities "to make rural life more profitable and attractive."

Record Attendance

Addressing the annual convention of the Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania—one of the 35 statewide organizations holding meetings in conjunction with the Farm Show—Horst declared:

"Farm women in the past few years have greatly extended their social and community life activities, and are now at the stage where their rival city women's clubs in their accomplishments."

The Farm Show set an opening day record in attendance yesterday, with more than 50,000 visitors streaming through the portals of the sprawling buildings to view the myriad of exhibits.

Contest judging took on an added impetus as new exhibits, ranging from huge draft horses to tiny woolly lambs, were shown off at two large arenas, one seating 7,600 persons and the other 1,800.

RUSSIA SENDS DELEGATION TO PA. FARM SHOW

By LEONARD A. UNGER

Harrisburg, Jan. 14 (P)—The Pennsylvania Farm Show took on an international aspect today with the arrival of a Russian delegation to examine the latest in American agricultural methods and machinery.

"We are very much impressed with this great Farm Show," said G. T. Kostlov, purchasing expert of the Amtorg Trading corporation, the Soviet government's purchasing agency in the United States.

Accompanied by five other Russians, Kostlov is making a detailed day-to-day tour of the 10,000 exhibits at the 31st State Farm Show, termed by officials as the largest of its kind in the world.

Kostlov declined, however, to disclose to reporters what amount of money he and associates have been authorized to spend in the purchase of American farm machinery, the principal object of their visit here.

The machinery display, occupying 60 per cent of the four acres of floor space in the main exhibition hall, has been assembled here from among the largest farm implement firms in the nation.

Kostlov said Russia was "particularly interested" in four-row planting machinery to be used on the great collective farms of the Ukraine. In passing, the Russian expert compared Pennsylvania's farming regions with those of the Soviet and said his delegation plans to visit the Pennsylvania State college to make a study of agricultural research work underway there.

BABY-SITTER, 20 WEDS 'BABY,' 13; OK WITH MAMA

New Kensington, Pa., Jan. 14 (P)—The 13-year-old "baby," who liked her 20-year-old "baby-sitter" so well that she married him, today set about the business of housekeeping, with every prospect of living happily ever after.

The "baby" is beautiful, little, blue-eyed and blonde, Delores Loman Schuffert, still a bobby-soxer but now the wife of handsome James Schuffert, a glass worker.

Their romance, which began when Mrs. Elsie Loman hired James to "mind" her daughter while Mrs. Loman worked nights as a charwoman, threatened to be blasted when the mother, who had sanctioned the marriage, objected to Delores' leaving home with her new husband.

Schuffert packed up and left.

Quits Eighth Grade

The bride filed a complaint before Justice of the Peace John Hunter, of Arnold, charging desertion.

Schuffert, arraigned for trial, told his sad story, baby-sitting and all.

"You didn't think your daughter too young to be married," said Squire Hunter. "Why do you object to her leaving your home to live with her legal husband?"

On thinking it over, Mrs. Loman decided she didn't object.

Squire Hunter dismissed the charges and said "everybody went home happy."

So now child-bride Delores has dropped her eighth grade classes and is studying things like making beds, washing dishes and cooking meals.

Horatio Alger Has Lost To Comic Books

New York, Jan. 14 (P)—Magazines and comic books have replaced Horatio Alger, Jr., as the favorite reading matter of American youngsters, according to a survey made by the Children's Aid Society in New York.

The society said today, the 115th anniversary of Alger's birth, that a poll among boys and girls eight to 14 years old at its seven clubs showed that fewer than one per cent ever had read any of Alger's "rags to riches" tales.

Only about 60 per cent of the children read books, the survey showed, and most of these prefer comic books. More than 95 per cent read magazines and listen to radio stories.

For the good of all...

A new year is here. Surely, in this year of opportunity, we can find a way—a fair way—to end the industrial unrest and conflict that hurts everyone. Selfish action, conceived in anger, will never help. Only devotion to the public good by all concerned will bring peace and prosperity. In this spirit, the National Association of Manufacturers offers the following program* for industrial harmony...for the good of all:

To develop sound and friendly relations with employees, to minimize the number and extent of industrial disputes, and to assure more and better goods at lower prices to more people, American employers should see that their policies encourage:

- (a) High wages based on high productivity, with incentives to encourage superior performance and output;
- (b) Working conditions that safeguard the health, dignity and self-respect of the individual employee;
- (c) Employment that is stabilized to as great a degree as possible, through intelligent direction of all the factors that are under management's control;
- (d) A spirit of cooperation between employees and the management, through explanation to employees of the policies, problems and prospects of the company

The right of employees to join or not to join a union should be protected by law. In exercising the right to organize in unions or the right not to organize, employees should be protected by law against coercion from any source.

When the collective bargaining relationship has been established, both employers and employees, quite aside from their legal obligations and rights, should work sincerely to make such bargaining effective. Collective bargaining should be free from the abuses which now destroy its benefits. It is believed that the abuses of collective bargaining will gradually disappear if both management and labor will adhere to the following principles:

1. The union as well as the employer should be obligated, by law, to bargain collectively in good faith, provided that a majority of the employees in the appropriate unit wish to be represented by the union.

2. The union as well as the employer should be obligated, by law, to adhere to the terms of collective bargaining agreements. Collective bargaining agreements should provide that disputes arising over the meaning or interpretation of a provision should be settled by peaceful procedures.

3. Monopolistic practices in restraint of trade are inherently contrary to the public interest, and should be prohibited to labor unions as well as to employers. It is just as contrary to the public interest for a union or unions representing the employees of two or more employers to take joint wage action or engage in other monopolistic practices as it is for two or more employers to take joint price action or engage in other monopolistic practices.

4. If a legitimate difference of opinion over wages, hours or working conditions cannot be reconciled through collective bargaining or mediation, employees should be free to strike where such strike is not in violation of an existing agreement. However, the protection of law should be extended to strikers only when the majority of employees in the bargaining unit, by secret ballot under impartial supervision, have voted for a strike in preference to acceptance of the latest offer of the employer. Employees and employers should both be protected in their right to express their respective positions.

5. No strike should have the protection of law if it involves issues which do not relate to wages, hours or working conditions, or demands which the employer is powerless to grant. Such issues and demands are involved in jurisdictional strikes, sympathy strikes, strikes against the government, strikes to force employers to ignore or violate the law, strikes to force recognition of an uncertified union, strikes to enforce featherbedding or other work-restrictive demands, or secondary boycotts.

6. No individual should be deprived of his right to work at an available job, nor should anybody be permitted to harm or injure the employee, or his family, or his property, at home, at work or elsewhere. Mass picketing and any other form of coercion or intimidation should be prohibited.

7. Employers should not be required to bargain collectively with foremen or other representatives of management.

8. No employee or prospective employee should be required to join or to refrain from joining a union, or to maintain or withdraw his membership in a union, as a condition of employment. Compulsory union membership and interference with voluntary union membership both should be prohibited by law.

9. Biased laws and biased administration of laws have made a contribution to current difficulties, and should be replaced with impartial administration of improved laws primarily designed to advance the interests of the whole public while still safeguarding the rights of all employees. The preservation of free collective bargaining demands that government intervention in labor disputes be reduced to an absolute minimum. The full extent of government participation in labor disputes should be to make available competent and impartial conciliators.

Compulsory arbitration, in particular, is inconsistent with American ideals of individual freedom, and is bound to destroy genuine collective bargaining.

10. All labor and related legislation should be consistent with the principles set forth above. Any existing statutes that are in violation of such principles should be brought into accord with them through appropriate action by the Congress.

We sincerely believe this program is a fair and practical plan for industrial peace.

Chapter 13

Carolina was at the McLane's boarding house when Bert and his mother returned to Los Angeles that afternoon. He was, in fact, reclining on Bert's daybed in the garage studio, but he sprang up quickly, his hand outstretched in welcome.

"Eddy and I were gabbin' about you jes' this minute," he said in his drawling Southern voice. "An here you bust right in."

Eddy eyed his younger brother anxiously. "What brings you home so soon, kid?"

Bert drew them together, an arm on each of their shoulders. "A wonderful money-making proposition that includes the bunch of us. The Alvarado Merry-Makers are going to play at a new night-club."

"Well, I'll be darned!" Eddy said, in infinite relief.

Carolina looked at Bert affectionately. "Jes like in the air corps. Just let you get separated from the unit a little while and you come back with a bunch o' hits."

"Spill it to us, Bertam. What's the deal?"

Bert dropped into an armchair, raised his feet upon the leather hassock. He told them, glowingly, about the fire-wrecked Van Cleeft hacienda, seven miles from Palm Springs; about the new lumber on the grounds, that he could buy at cost, to make repairs and dining-room furniture.

"You mean you're going to own the place?"

"The business, yes — why not? We'll rent the house for just a song."

And, as they listened with enthusiastic interest, he unfolded his carefully prepared plan for a tea-room and nightclub which might not only solve their rehabilitation problem but, he secretly hoped, show that arrogant bandleader at the Oasis hotel, he, too, was professional!

"It certainly sounds good," Eddy said. "A stretch on the desert might be a good thing for all us battered vets, at that."

Carolina agreed. "Phil Meredith was a Navy carpenter. Makin' tables and chairs out of that lumber should be right down his alley."

"Phil's on the way here now," Bert said. "Pete's bringing him over in his car."

It wasn't long before the trumpet player and guitarist arrived.

Pink-checked Phillip said, "You've got us going, Bertie. Shoot it to us quick!"

Pete, thin and sallow, and a chronic wet-blanket said, "You get us set on one thing here and right away you switch to something different."

"And what a difference!" Eddy said.

And Bert explained it all again enthusiastically.

Phil, who had been sleeping on a dining-room sofa at his brother's house, said "You mean there's a bunch of bedrooms that weren't burned — all furnished — ready to move into right now?"

"The niftiest 'servants' quarters' anybody ever saw. Everything's there except maybe a couple extra blankets."

"But what about restaurant equipment?" Pete wanted to know. "Who's got any dough for that?"

"No equipment's necessary. Pete. Everything's restaurant scale already—a huge stove, and refrigerator—pots and pans."

"I'm willing to go down and look it over," Pete conceded.

"Playing in a place like Palm Springs would sure put the Alvarado Merry-Makers on the map," Phil said.

Then Eddy, who had been very thoughtful, suddenly flooded the whole scheme with ice water. "It'd be wonderful for us, but what about Mom? We couldn't ask her to give up a sure thing here for a gamble with us down there."

"I guess you're right there, Eddy," Bert said, suddenly deflated. "Mom hasn't been at all keen about the idea, from the start." Then, as suddenly, he brightened. "Say—why couldn't we get Tony interested in this?—Here, he's coming now!"

Tony, who'd been pinch-hitting in the McLane kitchen during his vacation from his own job as chef, was hurrying across the vegetable patch. He came into the studio, his dark face wreathed in smiles.

"Your mother she tell me about everything," he said with Latin fervor. "All my life I want to cook in my own place — with nobody to be the boss but me. How about you let me put some money in — be partners in thees restaurant down there?"

"Tony, you just read my mind!" Bert thumped him on the shoulder. "You're just the man we need. We'll work out a deal, and I have a hunch you'll get a pretty swell return on your investment."

"I will entertain the customers, also — with beautiful Italian arias," Tony beamed.

"In your chef's hat and apron," Phil laughed. "Boy, you'll be a knockout!"

"So, I'm eliminated, am I?" Mrs. McLane stood in the doorway, smiling at them all.

"Of course not, Mom, if you want to come. We only thought you'd have to stay and run things here."

"Yes, I'll have to stay. But I'm going back with you for the rest of my vacation, if Tony will carry on a little while longer. I want to take measurements for draperies."

Bert swept an arm around her. "Lola, you're a peach! We'll need a woman's touch to make the place attractive."

"Make what place attractive?" Paul demanded, coming in.

Everybody told him at once. They sure were sold!

"Sounds like a good thing," Paul said finally.

"Then you'll come down with us?" Bert asked eagerly.

Paul stuffed his hands into his smart new topcoat. "No, I'm afraid you'll have to count me out. I couldn't throw over my job now. Besides—" he looked at Bert with a queer expression—"somebody's got to keep the home fires burning."

"He means Eileen," Bert thought with a hard squeeze at his heart. Well, he was right; somebody must look after her. She probably hated him now, anyway — after that note he'd left under her door.

Chapter 14

"Of course, you have to stay here, kid," Bert said.

The brothers stood looking at each other before them all: Paul, well-groomed and confident, Bert in the rumpled tweeds he'd driven from the desert in. His look tried to tell his brother that he understood how Paul felt about Eileen, and that it was really all right with him.

"We're going to miss you, though, Paul."

Paul tugged at the handkerchief in his coat pocket. "A drummer's not important, anyway. The Vets' Bureau can supply somebody to take my place."

"Nobody can do that, kid, and you know it." Even though Eddy and Bert were closer to each other, Bert was very fond of Paul. "Getting up the band was Paul's idea in the first place," he told the others.

Paul grinned, taking off his coat. "Well, you can't hate me for that—considering the way things are breaking." He hung his coat upon a hanger. "By the way, Eileen was asking for you."

"She was?"

Paul put his coat in the closet. "I think you ought to see her, boy."

Suddenly Bert felt like a heel. That note he'd left under Eileen's door, saying to forget him—what a weakling's subterfuge! She had a right, at least, to know why he'd broken things off. He looked at his watch. She'd be coming from the office now. Hurriedly he changed his shirt and necktie.

"You fellows are staying for chow — aren't they, Mom? If I'm not back, don't wait for me. I'm going for a walk."

He was at the corner when Eileen got off the Alvarado bus, fastening her dark green topper against the dampness of the evening. Her hair curled like a golden brim around a smart brown hat, and her brown eyes lit with pleasure as she saw Bert standing there.

"Why—hello! I thought you were in Palm Springs. What are you doing here?"

His spirits lifted, as always, at sight of her. "I'm taking you to dinner. Where's a quiet place that we can talk?"

There was tenderness in her uplifted glance, a troubled question, too. "No place is very quiet at this hour. Lines are waiting everywhere."

She said, after a brief pause, "I've got something in the refrigerator at the apartment. Bert. We could be quiet there."

"Well, okay—if you'd rather."

He took her arm. It was walking up steep Maryland Avenue, the day he'd been discharged from the army hospital, that Bert had suddenly realized that he loved Eileen Farwell. And, now, entering the cosy sitting room she'd furnished with things left by her mother, Bert had an overwhelming longing to take her in his arms and tell her so again. But he held himself in check. He struck a match and, stooping, lighted the wall heater.

"Your place keeps nice and warm, with the sun shining in all day."

Eileen took off her wraps and brought glasses of tomato juice from the little kitchenette. "This will tide us over, while the chops are broiling." She sat beside him on the sofa and, after a moment said, "Your note didn't really fool me. Bert. I knew there was some other reason why you rushed away like that."

"I suppose Paul has told you?" She nodded. "I made him tell me, Bert." She looked down and then raised her lovely, guileless eyes. "I told him that I love you, Bert—that we love each other."

"You told him that! Why—he's crazy about you, too, Eileen."

She let that pass. "You've been trying to throw us together a long time, haven't you?" she said gently. "Did you really think a girl's affections could be switched around like that? Did you think I wouldn't stand with you, in a little trouble?"

"It's a big trouble, Eileen. Suppose the desert doesn't fix me up. It isn't fair to hold you to your promise."

She smiled and, leaning to him, kissed his cheek. "You could never talk me out of keeping it, darling."

Her brown eyes twinkled. "Not unless you've met some glamor girl down there you'd rather have."

"As though there ever could be anyone but you!" Gladness surged into his heart. He took her in his arms and kissed her. "It would be like losing my right arm, honey, to give you up," he said up readily.

And then, for the third time that day, Bert told about the nightclub he was going to open in the deserted hacienda near Palm Springs.

Eileen listened, enthralled. "Have our own business—beside your own orchestra. Bert, that's wonderful."

"Tony Perrelli's coming in with us—investing money. He's going to sing for the customers, too."

Her eyes were glowing. "I could come down with your mother week-ends, and sing for you, too."

"Mother's going back with us on Monday, to take measurements for curtains and things—"

"Then in that case, I'll just take my portable sewing machine and we can make the curtains right there."

"But what about your job?"

"I have twelve days' accumulated sick leave. I'll speak to Mr. Morse tomorrow—get everything cleaned up by Saturday."

"The women in my life are angels!" An hour ago he was sure that he had lost her, and now he held her in his arms. Maybe when people loved each other this way, nothing could ever separate them.

The sound of sizzling in the oven brought Eileen to her feet. "The chops!" she said. And dashed out to their rescue.

And something about her movement suddenly reminded him of Gloria deSylvia. He frowned, jabbing his hands into his pockets, as he followed Eileen to the kitchen. Funny, he should think of that girl — now!

Chapter 15

Snap, Bert's pretty little spaniel, went to the desert with them. He had watched the preparations with sad eyes and drooping tail.

But when Bert said, "Hop in, girl. You're going!" Snap leapt into the car with Mrs. McLane, Eileen and Eddy, settling beside Bert's saxophone case, on a pile of blankets.

Tony Perrelli was shaking hands with everybody. "You see me down Palm Springs, jes' as soon's you get there's fix. I cook for your boarders good, Miss McLane, till you come home again."

Mrs. McLane smiled gratefully. "You bring me a mayonnaise recipe. Tony, and this is what comes of it!"

Tony's white teeth flashed in a happy smile. "Never I dream I will be partners soon in business with your boys."

Mrs. Van Buren, their star boarder, waved from an upper window. Gately, Paul said, "Good luck, fellas!" and dashed for his office. He called over his shoulder, "Have a good time, Eileen!"

And she answered, "Don't work too hard, Paul."

It was an imposing caravan. The trailer-truck, hitched to the sedan, held barrels of restaurant china, paints and calcomine and brushes, bedding, bolts of drapery material, and the upright piano.

Bert had thoroughly prepared them for what they were to find, and when they finally drew up before the half-burned hacienda set back off the main road, he said, "Well, look it over, fellas. If anybody isn't sold on it, he can drop out now and no hard feelings."

"Not bad, at all!" Phil exclaimed, as they viewed the huge rooms that had been palatial connecting drawing room, dining room and library. "Nobody'll recognize it, after a good paint job."

"Pale orange — like that busted chair — would be swell," said Eddy.

"We could paint green vines on the ceiling," Bert said, squinting across these holes where the firemen bashed the roof in."

"Why not leave 'em open — let the stars shine through?" Roy Croasley suggested. "This place has possibilities, fellas, and no kidding."

Pessimistic Pete, the guitarist, failed to see them, however.

"Doesn't look so hot to me. You'll sink in all your work and money, and chances are nobody'll drive out to this deserted dump." But even Pete grew cheerful when he saw the lovely rooms with single beds in the servants' wing which, miraculously, had been spared. "Kind of de luxe, after the hole in the wall I just left. Who am I bunking with, anyway? You, Phil?"

"Might as well room up the way we all drove down," said Carolina. "I'll sleep on the army cot." He and the newcomers had hit it off together nicely. Bert and Eddy, naturally, would want to room together.

"If Mom and Eileen double up, Carolina, you can have one to yourself," Bert said. Carolina hadn't been out of military hospital long, either.

Luggage was quickly stowed away, and while the ladies prepared luncheon of canned soup, cold roast of lamb and salad, the boys went out doors to look at the lumber which the real estate man had offered Bert at cost.

By a stroke of luck, Roy Croasley had been a Navy carpenter, like Phil — that had really been the deciding factor in his selection — and, between them, they produced some good ideas for converting planks and uprights into chairs and tables and other furniture needed for a public dining room. They were all agree to start things going.

Earlier, Eddy had proposed a plan of work and payment. Those who did specific labor would receive wages from the first income. Orchestra salaries would be paid at the weekly union scale after that. Eddy, Bert and Tony Perrelli, as joint partners, would get what was left over.

It was a long gamble, but the boys were willing. And when they'd seen the actual set-up, happy-go-lucky Charlie Morrison voiced their general opinion. "Don't worry about wages till you get some profits, fella. If you feed and room us down here free, you're giving us a good vacation."

"Hear, hear!" boomed Croasley. Phil said, "This desert air feels good to my sinuses already."

Their loyalty touched Bert deeply. "You won't regret it, fellas, I promise."

Eddy said, "The way things look to me, the money'll be there."

At luncheon they discussed a vital problem: whether or not to serve liquor. Opinion was divided.

"Will anybody come, if they can't drink?" asked Roy.

"Liquor means a big investment — for a bar, glasses and stuff, a license, a bar-tender's salary," Bert said.

"We'd probably drink up the profits ourselves, if we served it," Charlie Morrison grinned. "Let 'em get their booze in Palm Springs."

"We'll guarantee 'em A-1 food and fun," said Carolina. "If they want to bring their own, there won't be any extra charge."

Eileen smiled, and said nothing.

But Mrs. McLane clinched it with her homely philosophy. "When we were at the Oasis, Bert, listening to Blackey Davis's band, I thought 'People come here to the desert for their health, and then destroy it with cocktails and things, which everybody knows never did anybody any good.' The boys looked at each other. Mrs. McLane continued: "You came down here for your health, too, Son. It wouldn't be just right to make money by preventing other people from getting theirs."

"You're locked before you, start then," Pete prophesied darkly.

"Well, how about starting off with beer and soft drinks and see what happens?" Bert looked questioningly around the circle.

Everybody but Pete nodded. They'd find out later whether the decision increased their gamble!

Chapter 16

"How in heck can you do any writin' in all this hammerin'? Sounds like another war!" Carolina stood over Bert's writing table, mopping his freckled forehead. His face was splashed with turquoise paint, his old air-corps pants were covered with it, too.

Bert grinned up from the newspaper ads he was preparing. "Got another inspiration, buddy?"

"I want your advice about wall paperin' the powder room."

Bert waved him out. "The powder room's your creation, fella. Anything you say there goes."

"Okay, but don't say I didn't!" The rest of it was drowned by violent pounding.

It had been like this for ten days — sawing, hammering, the constant whir of Eileen's electric sewing machine. But the rambling hacienda had a lot to show for it!

The paneled walls were beautifully tinted, the spacious floors of the drawing room and dining room were cleaned and waxed and ready for dancing. Pete and Charlie Morrison had done a masterly job on the damaged ceiling. Artistic chairs and tables — handiwork of Phil and Roy — had been painted in bright shades and set against the walls and in the red-bricked patio. Gay chintz curtains hung at the tall windows. With sat in brocade salvaged from the draperies, Bert and Eileen had re-upholstered chairs and love-seats for the foyer. A big sign hung across the entrance — THE HACIENDA. Electric lights and telephone were in. The Alvarado Merry-Makers were practically ready for their gala opening.

Bert and Eddy were starting to the Palm Springs newspaper office with their advertising copy, when Mr. O'Malley, the real estate agent, drove up in his car.

"Not much like the old place," he said, looking around, "but you've certainly improved it. Be much easier to sell, this way, when the time arrives."

"You're not thinking of selling?" Bert said, in alarm.

"The property's up for sale, naturally. But I'm not advertising it." His smile was reassuring. "Maybe you boys'll want to buy it yourselves one of these days."

"Could be!" Bert warmed to the rosy prospect. "We'll have to make a pile of money first."

"We're going to invest in advertising," Bert said, showing his copy. "We'll get the people out with this and hope to bring 'em back again with what we give them."

"If you run into a fellow named Pepper Shayne at the newspaper office, tell him I recommended you."

"Somebody in the advertising department?"

"No, he's a reporter. He can do you a lot of good, one way or another, if he has a mind to."

"Thanks, Mr. O'Malley. We'll look him up."

But by one of those coincidences that almost seemed predestination, it was not the reporter, but Gloria deSylvia that Bert and Eddy ran into at the newspaper office. She came out, in a charm-revealing orange-and-green sun suit, stuffing sheets of paper into a beach bag that matched a wide-brimmed hat.

"Well, Bert, McLane!" she said, removing jeweled sunglasses and giving him the full power of her dark, magnetic eyes. "I've been wondering what happened to you."

Bert pressed her outstretched fingers. "This has happened, Miss deSylvia," he said, proudly exhibiting the advertising copy.

"You're down here — leading your own band?" she asked, when she'd glanced at it.

"Opening my own nightclub — ours!" He turned to introduce Eddy, but saw that he had gone into the building.

She was reading the road directions. "You mean that big place, set back from the road — where they had a fire?"

"No sign of fire now, Miss deSylvia. You should see what my boys have done with it."

"I certainly should!" She gave him an oblique smile. "Well, I wish you luck." And with a lingering glance, she turned, the essence of languid grace, and walked slowly down the street.

"Well, who's the ball of fire?" Eddy demanded. "A movie star?"

Bert grinned. "The beautiful torch singer at the Oasis Hotel."

"The one who sings for that Davis guy, who insulted you?"

"Don't hold it against her. Gloria's a real nice girl."

"Yeh — to stay away from?" Eddy said briefly. "Come on, let's find this Pepper Shayne."

They found him, a thin sandy-haired youth, with collar off, feet elevated to a battered desk, a match between his lips. He peered at them through owl-like spectacles, but at mention of O'Malley, stood up, shaking hands.

"Yes, I was there for dinner," Pepper smiled. "Didn't seem to have much luck with Blackey Davis."

Bert smiled, too. "Kind of glad of it now." He showed Pepper the series of ads for their opening.

"H-m! Takes guys with a lot of vision to start up, way out there." He asked questions, jotted down some notes. "A six-piece G.I. band will make some good publicity."

"You mean you'll give us a free writeup?"

The reporter chuckled. "It's not usually thrown in with small-space advertising. But this opening will be news — to quite a lot of people."

"Come out Saturday," Bert invited cordially. "The house is yours!"

"Well, thanks. I'll do that!" He shook hands with them again.

"Nice fellow," Bert said, as they started for the advertising desk.

"Seems to be," said Eddy. "What do you suppose he meant — news to a lot of people?"

Bert shrugged. "Search me, Eddy. Maybe he means the owners."

"I didn't like the sound of it, somehow" — Eddy frowned — "or that glamor puss's remarks, either."

Shoots His Wife, Then Kills Himself

California, Pa., Jan. 14 (AP)—Officers said Harry (Pez) Delbarre, 56, wholesale and retail beer distributor, killed himself with a 22 caliber pistol yesterday after wounding his wife.

At Charerol-Monessen hospital, Mrs. Delbarre's wounds were reported "not serious." A bullet grazed her abdomen and struck a rib.

Deputy Coroner Joseph Timko of Washington said he received this account of the shooting:

Dorothy Walters, 21, a clerk in Delbarre's office, said a phone call came from Mrs. Delbarre that "Peg just shot me."

Miss Walters went to Delbarre's apartment, just over the office, and found Mrs. Delbarre lying on the floor. While the clerk was aiding the injured woman, Delbarre walked past the room with a pistol in his hand and entered the bathroom. A moment later, a shot was heard. Delbarre was found dead, a bullet wound in his right temple.

HOMES DEFACED IN GUILD STRIKE

Philadelphia, Jan. 14 (AP)—Rewards totalling $2,000 have been offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of vandals who wantonly tossed jars of paint into homes of a Philadelphia Record executive, a CIO-American Newspaper Guild local official and two others.

The paint, thrown Sunday, defaced both the interior and exterior of the homes.

The Record and the Guild's Philadelphia-Camden (N.J.) local each offered rewards of $1,000. Editorial, advertising and circulation employees of the Record and the Camden Courier-Post have been striking for 68 days.

Meantime, a representative of the U. S. Conciliation Service meets with the Guild's strike negotiating committee today in an effort to end the dispute. G. Harry Young, the conciliator, said he hopes to bring spokesmen for management and the Guild together by January 20.

The homes of Luther G. Shelly, the Record's home delivery manager; local Guild secretary Arthur Riordon, and two neighbors of Record executives were damaged. Police said the vandals apparently mistook the homes of the neighbors for the executives.

Publication of the three newspapers by executives has continued since the strike began November 7.

MAYON VOLCANO ERUPTS TODAY

Manila, Jan. 13 (AP)—Southern Luzon's towering Mayon volcano, boiling for five days, erupted this morning with a furious shower of boulders and lava.

Lt. (jg) Robert Case of Nevada, Ohio, a navy weather officer, circled the volcano at 16,000 feet during the display in an army plane piloted by Capt. Robert A. Harris, of Dayton, Ohio.

"It (the peak) got redder and swelled like a bubble, then broke," Case related. "A lava stream went straight up to a height we estimated at 8,000 to 10,000 feet above the peak (itself 7,903 feet)."

"We saw huge rocks blown straight up. They looked like small houses to us even at a distance of a mile and a half or two miles. The eruption lasted about a half hour."

Two towns near the base were ordered evacuated earlier as lava, boiled over down the eastern and southern slopes and black smoke mushroomed three miles into the sky.

Joy IN OUR Job

Call it idealism, if you will. But the fact that we find pleasure in the compounding of prescriptions is your assurance of a task capably and conscientiously performed. And isn't that rather important to you at a time when illness comes? Think it over — and make a mental note to bring your next prescription to this "Reliable" Pharmacy for expert compounding.

RELIABLE PRESCRIPTIONS

Are you doing everything you can to prevent a shortage of natural gas?

Actually there is no shortage of natural gas. There is plenty of gas at the source—the scarcity exists in the capacity of the supply lines to bring this precious fuel from the abundant gas fields to your home.

The unprecedented swing to gas—to heat homes, for cooking, to heat water, and for refrigeration—threatens to tax gas supply lines to the limit.

Cold weather doubles the gas consumption. If a cold wave should be prolonged—gas pressures in the lines could drop to dangerously low levels.

Here's how you can help save this precious fuel!

1. Don't use your gas range to heat the kitchen. Gas ranges are intentionally designed to give you the most in cooler, cleaner, cooking convenience. They are not intended for use as house heaters and as such they are most inefficient—expensive and wasteful.
2. If you heat with gas, set your thermostat as low as possible. 68° is a healthy indoor temperature. Set your thermostat much lower at night.
3. Shut off rooms not in use, particularly attics and second floor bedrooms. Use gas room heaters sparingly. Close bedroom doors at night.
4. Don't wash dishes or shave in running hot water . . . don't fill the tub quite so full. Set water heater thermostat or flame at a minimum to fill your hot water needs. Repair leaky hot water faucets.
5. Install storm sash and insulation.

REBUILDING MERCHANT FLEET—Three small vessels near completion at a shipbuilding yard of Tyneside, England, as Britain rebuilds its war-depleted merchant fleet.

Die-Cutter Held In Murder Case

Norristown, Pa., Jan. 14 (AP)—Gerald C. Wentzel, 37-year-old die-cutter, was free in $15,000 bail today to await trial on charges he murdered a pretty divorcee by strangling her with a scarf.

Wentzel's attorney posted bond late yesterday. He is accused specifically of slaying Mrs. Miriam Green, 28-year-old brunette, as she lay nude, except for bobby socks, in her bed last December 9. When found a coat was thrown over her.

DUFF UNDECIDED ON BEST PLANS FOR HOSPITALS

Harrisburg, Jan. 14 (AP)—Governor-elect James H. Duff said today the Republican platform pledge of a "greatly expanded mental hospital program" will be carried out but the best method of "accomplishing it" remains to be decided.

The incoming governor made the comment in connection with reports he is considering recommending to the 1947 Legislature the creation of a new Department of Mental Health to supervise the state's mental hospitals and related institutions.

"That is a question for the Legislature to determine," Duff stated.

Holds Same Opinion

Turning to his campaign pledges on meeting the need for increased hospital facilities, Duff declared: "I am definitely of the same opinion as I was then and such a program as I described in my campaign speeches is vitally necessary and I intend to proceed with it."

During the election campaign, Duff said repeatedly that the Commonwealth has the responsibility of caring for the mentally ill and called for the construction of adequate facilities along with sufficient personnel to staff them.

New Department Urged

He already had given the green light for the construction of a new building at the Philadelphia state hospital at Byberry, an institution long in the limelight because of overcrowding and inadequate staffing.

Duff also declared during his campaign that he would obtain the opinions of the best-trained in the psychiatric field in deciding the best method for solving "the very serious problem" of caring for the mentally ill and all public health problems.

The Public Charities Association already has recommended establishment of separate departments of mental health and corrections and the merger of the remaining functions of the existing department with that of Public Assistance.

Pupils' Strike On Petting Ban Ended

Willits, Calif., Jan. 14 (AP)—Striking Willits high school students were back at class today, submitting to Principal Roy Good's strict edict against petting in the back pews and clenching in the corridors.

Good's strategy in extending a year-end vacation as a "cooling off" period worked, for the students decided yesterday to call off their third strike against the school administration. Teachers had threatened to quit their jobs if the strike continued.

Good insisted that "petting may be a part of human nature, but there's a limit to it." He stuck by his original order prohibiting boys and girls from embracing in class and when passing in the halls.

The students had protested that all they were doing was holding hands, but Good declared "they are doing a lot more than that."

Many irate parents sided with their children insisting that nothing more serious than innocent hand-holding had occurred. They had their children's word for it.

MUSTY ORDINANCE

Oxnard, Calif., (P)—That lonely looking individual leaning on the city limits sign was only police Judge Garland Nelson, waiting for a police escort to accompany his automobile through town.

He was all set to blow his horn all the way, he added—all in keeping with a 1908 city ordinance which he protests is still on the books. The ordinance adds that a bell or gong will do as well as the

Three Get Death On Treason Count

Warsaw, Jan. 14 (AP)—A Polish military tribunal today sentenced Count Kwary Grocholski and two other men to death for high treason on charges they were members of an organization which sought to overthrow the Warsaw government by force.

During the trial, one of the defendants testified that the British ambassador to Poland had received state and military secrets from the underground organization, known as WIN.

Condemned with Grocholski were Waldemar Baczak, 24, former employee of the Polish foreign ministry, and Capt. Witold Kalkicki, 36, of the Interior Security corps.

Dark-haired, attractive Christyna Kosiorek, 22, the fourth defendant, was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment.

HOW LONG IS A MINUTE FOR CONGRESSMEN?

By ARTHUR L. EDSON

Washington, Jan. 14 (AP)—How long is a minute?

Well, that depends. There's the humdrum, mine-run, 60-second minute most people use.

And then there's the congressional, inflationary minute used by House Speaker Joe Martin.

The House usually opens each day with one-minute speeches. And, oh, what fun your Representative has—popping up and popping off.

It's Martin's job to make with the gavel when the time is up.

To illustrate how the minute—like everything else these days—has gone up, let's look at a few of yesterday's speeches.

Rep. Harold Youngblood (R-Mich.), said he is brand new in Congress. But even if he is brand new in Congress, he knows where the 1952 Olympics should be held. In Detroit, that's where. And furthermore—

After two minutes and five seconds, Martin told Youngblood his minute was up.

Why the Care?

Rep. Bill Stevenson (R-Wis.), said he's interested in England's Socialism. What will come of it, if anything? Two minutes.

Rep. E. C. Gathings (D-Ark.), said the rice farmers down his way haven't been getting a square deal. One minute, 30 seconds.

Airplanes interested Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-S. C.). He wants them to quit crashing every which way.

"They've got everybody scared to death," he said, and then added: "There's something rotten in Denmark." One minute, 40 seconds.

After a little more of this, the House decided to adjourn.

The fellow who watches the official watch for Martin put it carefully into its cage.

Seeing how it—and Martin—keep time, nobody could understand why he was so careful.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14 (AP)—Sen. Edward Martin (R-Pa.) and Philadelphia's Mayor Bernard Samuel will formally dedicate the opening of a new Pennsylvania area college center at the Central high school here Thursday. Martin initiated the plan for college center while he was governor of the Keystone state.

Johnsons' Trial Is Delayed Temporarily

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 14 (AP)—Delay in delivery of a cablegram to Capt. Albert Johnson, Jr., in the Philippines has forced temporary postponement of the trial of the army officer, his father—former Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson—and five others on conspiracy charges.

Judge James A. Fee of the Oregon district, presiding in the case, said he will postpone hearing defense motions for dismissal of the charges until all defendants are in court.

Judge Fee said a cablegram sent to Capt. Johnson never reached the officer and that an airmail letter has been dispatched.

FIRE REPORT

Chester, Ill., (AP)—Chester's fire house, in a report by an Underwriters' Association after a fire prevention survey, was cited as a fire hazard. The report urged correction of five specific conditions. The fire chief, Herbert Stoeffel, assured the city council the corrections would be made.

Wolf bounties in the United States amounted to more than a million dollars a year by 1914.
